Old Drift House

Idyllic 'chocolate box' thatched cottage in the picturesque medieval village of Kersey with its ancient ford and traditional local pub. 5 Star Gold Award and Suffolk best self-catering establishment.

Despite more than 500 years of history Old Drift House now has modern facilities to go alongside its medieval features. The beautiful secluded garden is a joy in the heart of this timeless village situated in the middle of the Suffolk countryside.

There are four double bedrooms (two double, two twin connected if required) with linen and towels provided, three bathrooms, sitting room with baby grand piano, dining room, fully fitted kitchen/breakfast room, laundry room, central heating, dishwasher, freezer, washing machine and dryer. Telephone, cot and highchair are available by arrangement. There is ample garden furniture, barbecue and two terraces for informal summer dining. Entertainment includes stereo, TV, Freeview, video, DVD, and WiFi connection. There is a garage for car or bicycles.

Kersey is located in Constable and Gainsborough country. Visit Flatford Mill where Constable painted The Haywain, and see a superb collection of Gainsborough's work in Sudbury. Explore the Suffolk coast including Aldeburgh and Southwold, see the Saxon burial site at Sutton Hoo, and visit Lavenham (Guildhall and antique shops), Long Melford (Kentwell Hall and more antique shops), and Colchester (Roman remains). Kersey is a walker's paradise with several country pubs within walking distance. There are four golf courses nearby. Old Drift House is a lovely home from which to explore all of this, or to just stay put and relax, in quiet and splendid comfort.
