'Twixt the moors' and near the stunning North Devon coastline.

In the heart of the former Devon Village of the Year, Kings Nympton, sit the Old Rectory Cottages. The Old Rectory itself was the childhood home of renowned author of Lorna Doone, R. D. Blackmore.

Set between the Saxon church and the thatched village pub (which is just a short stroll away), this is the perfect setting for six Grade II listed holiday cottage conversions.

On arrival, after a personal welcome, you will feel yourself unwind amidst the peace and calm of the five acres of landscaped and informal gardens which provide a safe and carefree environment for children, or relax in our wonderfully warm indoor/outdoor swimming pool with large sun terrace overlooking the patchwork of fields and rural views. For our younger guests a play area with tree house and sandpit.

Each cottage is centrally heated, luxuriously and thoughtfully furnished and decorated with your comfort and relaxation in mind. Fully-equipped kitchens and spotless bathrooms complement spacious living areas with most having log fires. All cottages have their own sun terrace or garden area with teak furniture.
